“DO WE HAVE AN EMERGENCY CONSTITUTION”

The Roberts Lectureship was established in 1957 to honor Owen J. Roberts, an 1895 graduate of the College of the University of Pennsylvania and an 1898 graduate of the Law School. He was a former Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court and Dean of the University of Pennsylvania Law School (1948-1952). It is considered the foremost endowed lectureship at the Penn Law School. Over the years, the Roberts Lectureship has brought the Law School distinguished jurists and scholars such as Felix Frankfurter, Arthur Goldberg, Henry Friendly, William Hastie, Louis Pollak, Herbert Wechsler, Edward Levi, Archibald Cox, Paul Freund, Ronald Dworkin, John Rawls, Guido Calabresi and Antonin Scalia.

KATHLEEN M. SULLIVAN

Kathleen M. Sullivan is the Stanley Morrison Professor of Law at Stanford Law School, where she served as Dean from 1999 to 2004. She received a B.A. with distinction in all subjects in 1976 from Cornell University, which she attended as a Telluride Scholar, a B.A. in philosophy, politics and economics with first-class honours in 1978 from Oxford University, which she attended as a Marshall Scholar, and a J.D. cum laude in 1981 from Harvard Law School, where she won the Ames moot court competition.

After a clerkship with Judge James L. Oakes on the United States Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit and two years of constitutional law practice with Harvard law professor Laurence H. Tribe, she became a professor at Harvard Law School, where she taught for nearly a decade before joining the Stanford faculty in 1993. Her specialty is constitutional law, and she is author of numerous articles in the field and co-author with late Stanford law professor Gerald Gunther of the classic casebook Constitutional Law. She has won prizes for excellence in teaching at both Harvard and Stanford, and is an elected member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and of the American Philosophical Society.

This year she is a Visiting Scholar at the National Constitution Center/University of Pennsylvania Law School.
